DAKAR

BACKGROUND

The issue of gender cuts across many economic, social, political and legal domains. However, this issue is often overlooked or inadequately addressed in many developed and developing countries. Involvement of women in promoting gender responsive environments is integral in enabling greater gender in the context of growing economic uncertainties can lead towards greater problems of inequality, discrimination and marginalization. Studies have shown women who are empowered and given greater access to productive resources will yield long-benefits for a country. In other words, not focusing on gender particularly on the role of women in the initial design, implementation and monitoring of certain policies and programmes will only serve as a hindrance towards inclusive development. With this in mind, it is crucial to address and integrate gender issues in nation-building programmes.

This programme will allow participants to study and understand the different approaches and strategies adopted by the Malaysian Government in addressing issues pertaining to gender development. Malaysia, as the host country of this training programme serves as a relevant example of a harmonious yet multicultural society. Whilst Islam is set as the official religion of the country, other people of different religious affiliations are free to practice their religion. Moreover, women are empowered and given recognition in and nation-building since independence. Furthermore, policies take into consideration of the role and responsibilities of women. The 10th Malaysia Development Plan for example, has a special clause about gender and inclusiveness in development.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the programme, participants would be able to:

- ❖ study policies and programmes introduced by Malaysia, especially in the context of the changing roles and contribution of women in areas of development;
- ❖ serve as a platform for participating countries to discuss and debate on latest developments with regard to the issue of gender and development;

MALAYSIAN TECHNICAL COOPERATION PROGRAMME (MITCP)

The history of the Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MITCP) dates as far back as the First Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting (CHOGM) for the Asia Pacific Region in Sydney in February 1978, where the idea was first mooted. The MITCP was officially launched on September 7, 1980 at the Commonwealth Heads of State Meeting in New Delhi, India, to signify Malaysia's commitment to South-South Cooperation, in the particular Technical Cooperation among Developing Countries (TCDC).

In line with the spirit of South-South Cooperation, MITCP is considered as a bilateral technical cooperation programme with an objective to share development experiences with other developing countries. This "prosperity-neighbour" philosophy is the underlying basis for the MITCP. The programme was first formulated based on the belief that the development of a country depends on the quality of its human resources. The programme provides various forms of technical cooperation in areas where Malaysia has the experience and expertise. The MITCP emphasises on the development of human resources through the provision of training in various areas which are essential for a country's development such as public administration, agriculture, poverty alleviation, investment promotion, ICT, banking and English language.

Beginning 2010, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (MOFA) Malaysia is responsible for the administration and coordination of MITCP activities. Since its inception, the MITCP has expanded in terms of its scope and coverage with emphasis on the exchange of development experience. More than 2,000 participants from 139 member countries come to Malaysia annually under MITCP. Currently, the MITCP has a membership of more than 28,000 alumni worldwide. The 73 MITCP training institutions offer more than 100 short-term specialised courses, many of which are centres of excellence for training with the aim of building human capital in other developing countries.

OBJECTIVES

- ❖ To share Malaysia's development experiences with other countries;
- ❖ To strengthen bilateral relations between Malaysia and other developing countries;
- ❖ To promote South-South Cooperation; and
- ❖ To promote technical cooperation among developing countries.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC POLICY AND MANAGEMENT (INPUMA)

The International Institute of Public Policy and Management (INPUMA), University of Malaya, has established itself as one of the leading resource centres for public policy and human resource management in the region. This has been achieved through carefully crafted strategies and by consistently benchmarking itself against the best global practices in public policy. This, along with a clear recognition of current national and international developments in the political, economic and social spheres, constantly shape INPUMA's outlook and perspective. Against the backdrop of the global, social, economic and political uncertainties, INPUMA seeks to analyse, debate and monitor its implications or public policies at both the international and national levels.

Over the years, INPUMA has succeeded in contributing to the intellectual discourse on public policy issues in Malaysia through forums, conferences and public lectures. These events revolve around topical and important public policy issues such as good governance in higher education, the impact of ICT in bridging the urban-rural (or generational) divide, sustainable development, promotion of Malaysia as a global hub, as well as development issues close to the heart of the civil society. They are designed to provide platforms to policy makers, leaders and the mass media to exchange and articulate ideas pertaining to policy issues. INPUMA, invariably, acts as an intellectual laboratory which tests out the best possible inputs for public policymaking.

In accordance with its multi-disciplinary focus, INPUMA seeks to collaborate with the public and private sectors in research programmes with the humanities and social sciences. A broader understanding of public policy and management is gained through this cross-fertilisation and this has helped to place INPUMA in a coveted position as one of the distinguished public policy institutions in Southeast Asia.

ACADEMIC PROGRAMME

The Master of Public Policy (MPP) provides rigorous on-campus training. The MPP is offered at a post-graduate level and is geared to the needs of practising or prospective managers who wish to acquire or enhance the skills necessary for effective and responsible public sector management and policy analysis. The programme will equip candidates with knowledge in the fields of public policy processes and affairs in local and global contexts, and with theoretical and methodological skills in public policy issues.

PROGRAMME (MITCP)

UNIVERSITY IN A GLOBALISING
WORLD THE WAY FORWARD

19-28 APRIL 2015

BACKGROUND

The definition of diversity in the modern world today does not only encompass race and ethnicity but gender, political ideologies and socio-economic background as well. Diversity has indeed contributed to the growth and development of societies worldwide. However, due to mismanagement of resources by governments, societies can easily fall into instability.

The "Managing Diversity in a Globalising World" training programme is part of the Malaysian Government's continuous effort to help enhance the knowledge and skills of public officials from developing countries in the areas of capacity building under the Malaysian Technical Cooperation Programme (MTCP). The programme is implemented by the International Institute of Public Policy and Management (INPUMA), University of Malaya.

This training programme offers the nation-building and developmental experiences of Malaysia – a country characterised by distinct ethnic, religious and cultural differences – as informative and instructive lessons to the participating countries. Given that Malaysia is able to develop while avoiding serious conflict or disintegration as a multicultural society, it can therefore offer its successful nation-building experience as a model to post-conflict countries which are committed to fulfilling the goals and agenda of national reconciliation and reconstruction. In effect, many of Malaysia's policies and accompanying programmes have contributed to enduring peace and stability. Specifically, the aim of the training programme is to enable participants to critically evaluate the changing role of the State and the transformation of society caused by and in response to, the phenomena of evolving political demography and pressures of democratisation.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the programme, the participants would be able to:

- ❖ enhance the understanding of multiculturalism via lessons from the experiences of other plural societies, particularly Malaysia, amongst participants from Southeast Asia and other regions;
- ❖ instill the principles of constitutionalism, institution building, and good governance in the context of multiculturalism amongst the participants as representative of their respective countries;
- ❖ enable the development of viable public policies and political mechanisms in managing potential areas of conflict in order to attain the goals of peace, security and nation building;
- ❖ develop greater understanding and closer relations between Malaysia and participating countries; and
- ❖ provide a platform for participants to establish professional networks with Malaysian public officials and other organisations.
